Edwin Lindo JD
Lecturer - Department of Family Medicine
Associate Director, Critical Teaching and Equity
Center for Leadership and Innovation in Medical Education
University of Washington School of Medicine

Edwin Lindo, JD is a Critical Race Theory Scholar that asks and explores the difficult questions of Race & Racism within the institutions of Medicine and Law. Edwin brings the interdisciplinary study of Critical Race Theory to Medicine and Law so we can better learn how racism detrimentally affects our health, learning, teaching and justice. As a faculty member of the Department of Family Medicine, Edwin works closely with the medical education and GME curricula, has developed curriculum and teaches Critical Race Theory and Medicine, and provides student and faculty development around the issues of racism and equity in patient care. Edwin's research and scholarship focuses on the history of racialized medicine, race & racism within medicine, social justice, social movements and decolonized pedagogies for critical education.
